Morningstar Commodity's Research arm functions as the industry's go-to source for understanding market fundamentals via independent investigation. Specializing in oil, gas, and power market analysis, Morningstar's seasoned experts help clients' front offices, risk managers, analysts, and traders navigate volatile markets to make more informed decisions and improve returns.

Thought Leadership

Learn about the most compelling issues hitting the market, from North American crude oil and refined products to U.S. gas and power markets, infrastructure, and regulation. With such broad yet deep expertise across the energy industry, Morningstar's extensive library of publications, including in-depth outlooks, event-driven notes, and weekly storage reports, advise clients successfully on their research needs.

Constant Innovation

Get in on the ground floor of development of groundbreaking models that, upon completion, are used by clients to extract value from large volumes of data. For instance, our in-house developed ISO Load Forecast Model can be customized to meet a wide range of needs in the power and utility sectors. The researchers' outlook notes and analyses add to their signature inventive discoveries.

Marketplace Integration

Gain more insight with analyst models, webinar recordings, and vendor documents to see what analysts uncover in the competitive dynamics of energy and commodity markets using Morningstar's Markets tool. Viewing within Markets provides clients with full access to both new and archived reports alongside customized data feeds in one manageable space.

Customized Insight

Understand how market trends, forecasts, and events directly affect specific business goals with one-on-one analyst access. As part of a client's subscription, Morningstar's research team communicates with clients via phone, email, or onsite presentations to provide personalized recommendations.

Comprehensive Market Understanding

Participate in multiclient studies by providing input on timely topics. From clients' submitted responses, researchers aggregate data into leading reports to provide valuable feedback based on the prevailing views and assumptions of industry members' answers to the questions addressed so that customers can understand the market more fully.

The research notes and storage reports that we generate help clients leverage valuable market intelligence and apply insights from our products' data feeds to real-life scenarios. Access from any browser, via Markets dashboard, or by speaking with an analyst one-on-one.
